ABSTRACT

A method and apparatus for adjusting exhaust flow, and the apparatus has a programmable exhaust control regulator generating a first input signal to a motor control circuit, an exhaust flow meter generating a second input signal to the motor control circuit and a motor driven control valve moved to different positions according to the first and second input signals, the control valve being installed in an exhaust portion of the hot plate apparatus.

PHI\\114976.2 11

5